at The National Portrait Gallery
Talk followed by visit to exhibition

Tickets £25

We are delighted to offer members a talk at The National Portrait Gallery about Thomas Gainsborough's career, from youth to maturity which tells the story of an 18th century provincial artists rise to metropolitan fame and fortune.

After the talk there is an opportunity to view the exhibition, including works that have never been on public display in the UK before and offers a unique insight in the private life and motivations of one of Britain's greatest artist.

Gainsborough often visited Kew, staying at no.25 Kew Green and chose to be buried in a modest tomb in St Anne's churchyard.

The National Portrait Gallery offers step-free access via the shop entrance on St Martin's Place and a ramp at the Orange Street entrance. The lecture theatre is also wheelchair accessible. However, the nearest underground stations of Leicester Square and the Embankment do not have lifts.
